Thursday, July 1. 1703

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated July 2.

Venice, June 16.

THE 3000 Imperialists and Heydukes, commanded by General Vaubonne, having appear'd near Villa Franca in the Mantuan, the French have detach'd some Troops towards Monzambano and Valeggio, to cut off their Passage; and there is some Advice of a Rencounter near Pelegrina, of which we expect more distinct Particulars. 'Tis said, that General had the Advantage, and that he is since gone towards Uffolingo, being reinforce'd to 4000 Men, there to wait for other Troops that are arriv'd at Trent, with which he is to rejoyn the Forces commanded by Count Staremburg at Ostiglia. Yesterday an Express brought advice to the Emperor's Ambassador, That the French have been defeated near Mirandola: Monsieur d'Albergotti advanc'd with about 6000 Men to attack that Place, whereupon General Staremburg march'd with 11 Battallions and 1200 Horse to prevent him. He commanded the Foot in Person, and the young Prince de Vaudemont the Horse. They march'd with great diligence, and fell upon the French at Ponte San Martino. The right Wing of the Imperialists charg'd the Left of the French, and after an hour's Fight, put them to the Rout, and oblig'd them to retire with Precipitation towards Finale di Modena; From whence the French write, that they lost about 200 Horse and 12 Officers, without mentioning how many Foot. But the Imperialists tell us, the French lost 1500 Men; among them a Lieutenant General, and other Officers of Note.

Hamburg, June 29. On the 1st of next Month the King of Denmark is expected at Rensburg; where 'tis said he will give Directions for several thousand Men to be pick'd out of the Militia to be incorporated in the Regular Troops. There is a talk that 12 Men of War are order'd to be fitted out speedily at Copenhagen. On the 4th his Danish Majesty is expected at Pinnenberg, and some say the King of Prussia will come thither.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated July 3.

Hanover, June 29. Letters from Berlin of the 23d advise, that his Prussian Majesty is at Rosendale; and that 6 Battallions of Foot and 3 Regiments of Horse, which his Majesty has promis'd to send to the Upper Rhine, are already on their March. They write from Vienna, that that Court is going to establish a Bank, in order to facilitate the raising a Sum of Money for the publick Occasions on any Emergency; That the Princes of Lichtenstein and Swartsenburg will be made Presidents of the Council that is to manage it, of which two Councillors of the Treasury and some of the most Eminent Merchants will be made Members.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated June 21.

Lorrain, June 12. The English Fleet came lately into the Road of the Island of Groy; The French fir'd their Cannon on three of their Ships that came nearest to the Shore, and likewise threw one Bomb: The English sail'd from thence to Bell Isle. There is a report at Paris, that the English made ready their Boats and put Men into them in order to land on the Island of Groy; and that a Fire was seen on that Island for an hour together: but the Letters from Bell Isle say, that the Sea being too rough, the English could not set any Men ashore; and that the French had drawn together 5000 Men in the Country thereabouts to oppose the Landing of the English. They tell us likewise from Bell Isle, that the English went from Groy towards the Coast of Poitou.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated July 2.

Letters from Paris of the 13th of June, that came through a Neutral Country, advise, that the French Forces posted on the Island of Groy, made so great a Fire from their Cannon, that the English could not land any Men; Whereupon three of their Ships that were detach'd from their Fleet retir'd on the 6th of June in the Morning. They return'd that Afternoon in a greater Number, and would have made a Descent in another Place, but were repuls'd, with no more loss on the side of the French than six Men; And they took an armed Bark from the English. Great Numbers of the Militia of Poitou were drawn together, and posted at convenient Places to oppose a Descent on that Coast.

Falmouth, June 26. Yesterday arriv'd the Joseph and Rachel, Thomas Delbridge Master, from Boston in New-England, who on the 24th instant met with a French Privateer of 12 Guns, with whom he engag'd for five hours and got clear from the Privateer; she has 10 Guns and 17 Men, and is bound for London. This day came in the St. Anthony from Montferrat in 13 Weeks, she brought a
